PARROT GIVES POLICE CALL

Useful Bird Owned by English Hotel Proprietress—How King's Pet Saved Royal Property.

The proprietress of a hotel in Hertfordshire owns a parrot which she has trained to whistle in exact imitation of a police whistle, London Answers states.

The bird's accomplishment has come in handy on more than one occasion when rowdy customers have started to make a disturbance.

To King George belongs a parrot which on one occasion saved York cottage from being burgled. The royal family were at dinner, when suddenly loud cries were heard coming from an upper room where the bird was kept.

"Look out!" it screamed. "Look out! Look out!"

A hurried rush upstairs resulted in the discovery that one of the bedroom windows had been forced open, the burglars having secured access to it by means of a ladder brought from a neighboring outhouse. On the alarm being raised by the parrot they promptly bolted.

Parrots, however, are not invariably on the side of the police. Frank Woodstock, the famous "king of the colliers," evaded arrest for years owing to one he possessed.

His "mint" was situated at the bottom of a blind alley in the borough, and the bird, whose cage was placed in such a position that it commanded the entrance to the court, had been trained to give instant warning of the approach of strangers.

MANY BIRDS AVOID IRELAND

Species That Are Common in England Are Not to Be Found in the Emerald Isle.

One of the curious features of wild life in Ireland is the absence of some of the birds best known in England. The nightingale, for instance, is never found in Ireland, while the wood-warbler, the redstart, all the species of woodpecker, the wren, the nutcracker and several other kinds are so rare that they are unknown to the great majority of the people. There seems to be no very obvious reason for the absence of these birds. It may, perhaps, be found in the lines of migration along which the birds travel, for most of those mentioned above are not resident in Britain all the year.

But it is certainly strange that such a bird, for instance, as the common whitethroat, should thrive everywhere in Ireland, while the lesser variety is unknown, and that while the willow warbler is one of the commonest of summer birds its larger relative, the wood warbler, is found in only a few places and in very few numbers. Ireland can only boast of one bird, the hooded crow, which is not a regular visitor in the neighboring island—Christian Science Monitor.

There were as merry soldiers in the days of the American Revolution as there are now. One of the most laughable figures in the Continental army was Doctor Skinner, a waggish surgeon whose huge fur cap and long beard made him the butt of the soldiers everywhere. When asked by a teasing comrade why he wore such a lengthy beard, he answered: "It is a secret, sir, betwixt my God and myself, that human impertinence shall never penetrate." And this same doughty surgeon, who was always ready to pick a quarrel in private, took excellent care of his precious person on the battlefield. "Every man has his sphere of action," said he, "beyond the limits of which he ought never to emerge. Mine amidst the tumults of war, the conflicts of battle, is in the rear. There I am always to be found! I am firm at my post!" And nobly he lived up to his principle.

One night when an alarm sounded, Colonel Lee rushed forward to learn the cause and met Doctor Skinner in full retreat. "What's the matter, doctor?" called Colonel Lee. "Whither so fast? Not frightened, I hope?" "No, colonel, no!" replied the doctor hurriedly. "Not absolutely frightened, but, I candidly confess, most terribly alarmed!"

Among other merry ways in the Continental army was an Irishman named Levinstone. He belonged to Marion's brigade. One very dark night he was separated from his companions and, as he was wandering around, he was suddenly surrounded by a troop of horsemen, and a pistol was pressed against his breast. "Declare instantly to what party you belong," shouted a harsh voice, "or you are a dead man!" Levinstone peered through the darkness, but could not make out the uniforms of the troopers. "I think, sir," said he cautiously, "it would be a little more in the way of civility if you were to drop a hint, just to let me know which side of this question you are pleased to favor." "No jesting!" roared the trooper. "Declare your principles or die!" "Then," shouted Levinstone, "I will not die with a lie in my mouth! American—to the extremely, you spalpeen! So do your worst!" "You are an honest fellow!" laughed the horseman. "We are friends, and I rejoice to meet a man faithful as you are to the cause of your country!"—New York Evening Post Magazine.

On the day that Robert Morris signed the Declaration he was the wealthiest and greatest merchant in Philadelphia. He purchased goods in England and sold them here at a large profit. His ships were on the ocean. He had a hot-house and an ice-house, the first in America. No price he might have asked would have gone unaccepted or unpaid by the British government—James B. TO SAIL GLOBE IN A LIFEBOAT

Three Norwegians Plan Interesting Trip That Will Take About Year and a Half.

ALL ARE TRAINED SEAMEN

Boat Will Have No Covering Except Canvas Awning to Spread Over the Bunks When It Rains—Boat to Be Sloop Rigged.

New York.—Norwegians are no longer the leading sea rovers they once were, but their adventurous spirit is not yet extinguished. There is a round tower at Newport, built of rude stones, a lasting monument to some forgotten visitors to these shores. Who built it no one can tell, but surely not aboriginal Americans for it embodies principles of architecture unknown to them. Anthropologists believe it was built by the Norsemen, who, there is evidence to show, found America long before Columbus, as early as the Tenth century. Indeed there is a Norse tradition to that effect.

Adventurous Norwegians.

These considerations are revived by the fact that three young Norwegians now in this city are planning to cross the Atlantic ocean in an open boat and eventually to circumnavigate the globe. They are Capt. Mimer Tonnings and Mates Othar Petterson and Helge Westering. Tonnings was at work on the Panama canal in 1915, but going home was impressed into the Norwegian navy. Petterson was petty officer on another ship in the same service. Westering has also seen much sea service. They are practically stranded here now, and are laid up at the club of the Norwegian Master and Mates' association, No. 565 Henry street, Brooklyn, where a reporter was told their plans. Tonnings acted as spokesman while the other two listened and gave assent. Their plans are nearly completed.

They have secured a 20-foot lifeboat, built by the Atlantic Life Boat company of South Brooklyn. It is a gift from the company, and while it does not differ from the ordinary lifeboat built for ship use, certain changes have been made to adapt it for the specific purposes for which it will be used.

Will Be Sloop Rigged.

It will be sloop rigged, having a 26-foot mainmast and a 12-foot topmast, three feet of which will be above the bounds, thus affording a 32-foot sail hoist. Two sets of sails will be carried, one of light canvas for light and moderate weather, and one of heavy canvas for stormy weather. However, they hope to escape stormy weather, except an occasional squall by sailing in summer time. The boat will have no covering except a canvas awning to spread over the bunks when it rains. Cooking will be done on an oil stove. They will start with a stock for 14 weeks' provisions in the hope of being able to cross the Atlantic within that time.

They will leave Sandy Hook in the near future and steer for the Selly or Azore Islands. From Gibraltar they will go to Suez, Sumatra, the Philippines, Hawaii, California, Panama, pass through the canal and come up the Atlantic coast to New York. The entire voyage is expected to take from 16 to 18 months.

ONCE WEALTHY GERMANS HIT

High Cost of Living Coupled With Cheapness of Mark and Low Salaries Causing Hardship.

Berlin.—The high cost of living, coupled with the deterioration of the mark and low salaries, has hit German government employees such a blow that a number of them say frankly the only way in which they can exist is "to go deeper into debt every day."

Some of them have borrowed money on their salaries for months ahead, and must borrow more.

One government official, on a salary of 2,000 marks a month, which before the war was a reasonable wage, said he had been unable to buy any clothes for four years, that his garments now were threadbare, his shoes worn out, and he had contracted debts with his grocer which he could not pay.

"There is nothing to do but keep on going deeper and deeper into debt," he said. "I do not know where it will end, nor what will become of me. I earn 2,000 marks a month; a suit of clothes costs me 3,000, a pair of shoes 500, a good meal nearly 100; cigars, cigarettes, wines, they are out of the question."

It is not uncommon for men who were once wealthy or held high-salaried positions to ask foreign acquaintances to remember them in case they have an old suit or a pair of shoes "to throw away."

Japan's Yap note was almost too frank to be Japanese and too definite to be diplomatic.
